Categorization Based on Fig Mouth Type and Color

Dried figs are categorized into three groups based on the degree of fruit opening: fully open, medium open, and closed-mouth figs, each available in light, yellow, and dark (brown or mahogany) colors. Among this variety, ordinary fig flour is produced as closed-mouth figs in light and brown shades, while thread-style coin-shaped fig flour is offered with the same color range, presenting a more attractive and distinctive appearance. This precise categorization allows customers to choose according to their preferences and market needs

Variety of Dried Figs

Among all products, open-mouth dried figs include the Parak, Sadik (101), Ghoncheh, and Kelidi types, which have a soft texture and natural taste. Closed-mouth figs are also offered in Super and Premium grades, making them highly suitable for export and industrial use due to their long shelf life and high quality. In this group, compressed (pressed) figs hold a special place; they are packaged in compact nylon packs with light and brown colors. Due to their durable packaging and uniform appearance, they are considered one of the most popular types of export figs
